DIRECTIONS

Place an ABC game board and a small Hot Cocoa related manipulative on a tray. Mini marshmallows, white pom poms, white navy beans, white pony beads and mini erasers all work well. We used a baking sheet as a tray, but anything to contain the manipulative a bit will work.

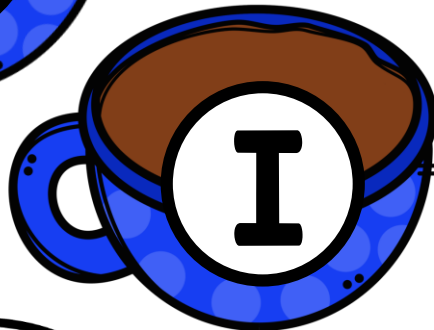

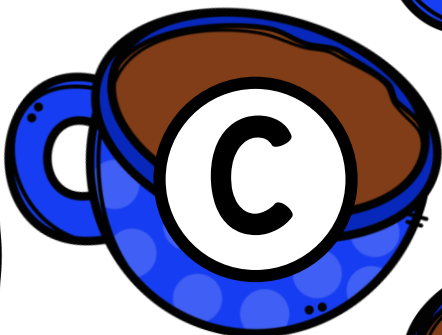

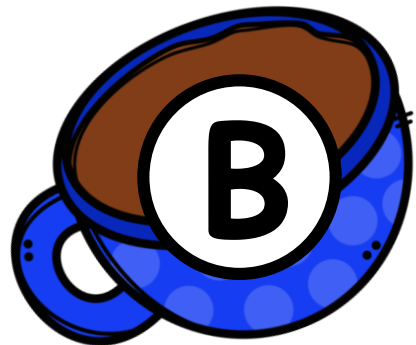

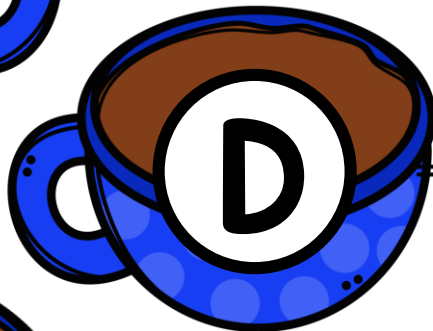

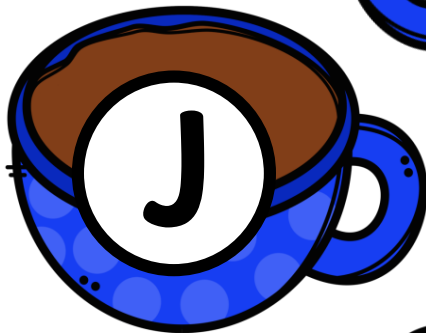

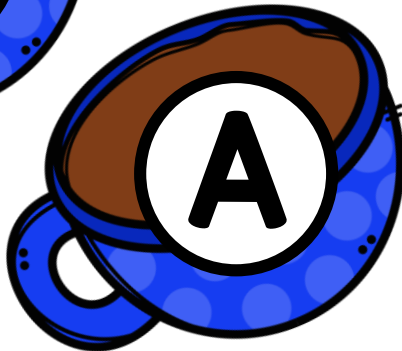

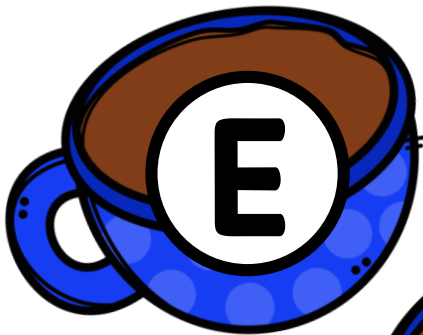

Then get rolling! Have kids roll the manipulative then name the letter it lands on (or the letter it's closest to). Kids love to experiment with rolling it slowly, rolling it quickly, flicking it, and spinning it between their fingers. This is a great for extra fine motor practice!

Depending on your focus for the activity you can practice naming the letters, letters sounds, or a word beginning with the letter.

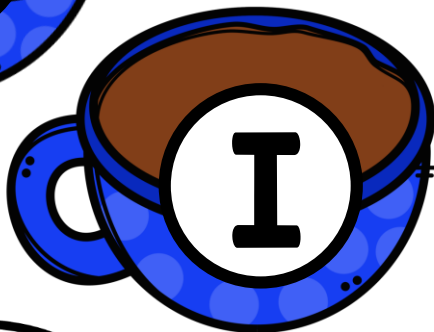

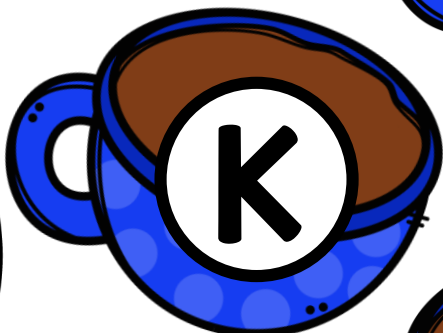

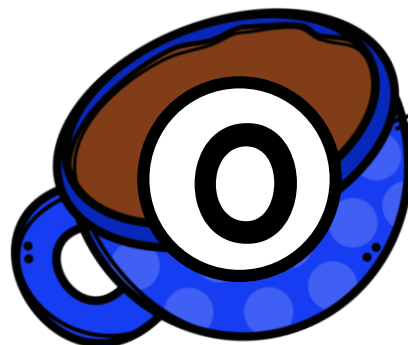

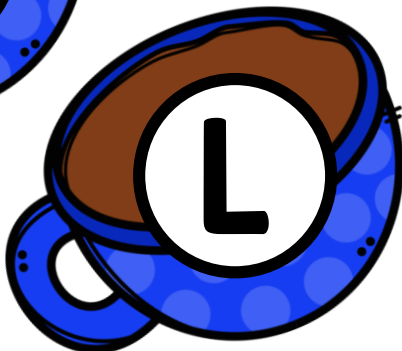

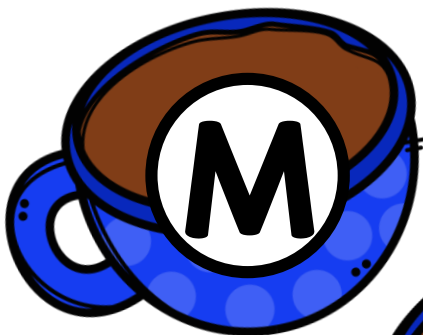

You can also print two game boards and have kids cover the letters on one of them as they roll and say on the original mat. This will help them keep track of which letters they have already done. (Cover each cup more than once for added practice. We like to put three "marshmallows" in each cup on the tracking sheet before we finish the game.)
